WHO & WHO - and Why

SUGGESTED AS VICE-REINE

When the first Irish parliament since the dawning of the nineteenth century assembled in the "Old House at College Green," Dublin, where the eloquence of Grattan and Flood stirred the Europe of their time, an American woman may stand at the throne, listening to her titled husband reading the king's speech inaugurating home rule in Ireland. This great day, so soon to come, is the talk of town and country in the British isles.

The question that has rocked the politics of the three kingdoms to the foundations of political life has ceased to be political. Its social side is what now appeals most rapturously to volatile Ireland and gay, dashing, fun-loving Dublin.

Two women are most prominently spoken of as the likeliest to lead the new regime as vice-reine of Ireland. The first is Consuela, duchess of Marlborough, the self-separated mistress of Blenheim palace, which the English people gave to "lan" Churchill for his victories in protection of the "low countries." The duchess would make a most dignified, queenly hostess. Only one circumstance seems to bar the way between her and the dream which she has cherished when the Marlborough marriage was made—her domestic entanglement. This, however, appears to be drawing to a welcome close.

Queen Mary has expressed her desire that the duke and duchess should forgive, forget, and begin all over again. And it is hinted that if the proud Consuela consents to be pacified, the vice regal coronet will grace her brow.

PAYS HOMAGE TO A SERVANT

On the eve of his departure for the land of the heather and thistle, the Laird of Skibo bade farewell to one of his servants who had been in the service for 23 years. The occasion was made a gala one in the servants' hall at the Fifth Avenue mansion, New York, the Carnegie family participating in the function and being no small part of it.

Skibo castle will be minus its head house maid in the person of Miss Magie Anderson. In giving her best years in service, Miss Anderson developed some of the thrift for which the iron master is famous, and announced that she was going to open a public house in Edinburgh. That is her home town, but the only living member of her family is a brother out in San Francisco. She planned to pay the brother a visit, and the laird presented her with a round trip ticket to the metropolis of the Pacific coast. This was not all he did. He presented her with a handsome gold watch and a life pension of $500 a year. In fact the servants' hall were gathered all the help of the big mansion at eight o'clock. The haughty Jeems of the upper hall condescended to lend his dignity to the occasion and beamed on simple Sandy from the stables. The house maid fraternized with the cook, the butler with the groom. It was a truly harmonious family gathering.

THE "FIRST LADY OF LONDON"

By the election of her husband to the important position of chairman of London county council, Lady Chaylesmore, an American woman, becomes in a sense the "First Lady of London." The county council, of course, is the real governing body of the greater city, and the position of chairman corresponds in a general way to that of mayor of a city like New York, the so-called lord mayor of London "ruling" over only the old city of London—about a square mile in area.

Furthermore, Lord Chaylesmore himself is half American. His mother was Charlotte Harman of New Orleans and he is a living example of the advantage of wedding the hustling, practical qualities of the American with the liberal conservative qualities of the best English aristocracy. Lady Chaylesmore, who was Elizabeth French, daughter of F. O. French of New York, has become one of the most popular and respected women in English society. She is tall and handsome, and possesses that dignity which is so highly valued in this country.

NEW QUEEN TO BRING GAIETY

Alexandrine, the new queen of Denmark, promises to delight her subjects. Queen Louise lived austere, despite her great wealth (more than $15,000,000), and the French blood in her veins that come from the Bernadotte line to which she belonged. It is said of her that she never attended a theatrical performance or a ball. Queen Alexandrine is far more pleasure-loving, and the court, when the period of mourning has passed, may well be expected to take on a gaiety it has not shown for some years. The queen is a sister of the crown princess of Germany. Their mother is Grandduchess Anastasia, a shining light in society on the Riviera, whose liveliness and unconventionality sometimes make Emperor William nervous.

Though Queen Louise is rich in her own right, she is thrifty, and as she held the purse strings during her husband's reign, the Danish royal family maintains its reputation of being poverty stricken. Denmark can afford to pay her sovereign only about $250,000 a year, which is not enough to support royal state to compare with the other European monarchs, whose civil list (salaries) run into millions.

AN ANCIENT WOODS

Sherwood Forest, Robin Hood's Haunt, Still Thrives.

Notable Woodland in England is Said to Be Unequaled in All Europe—Many Kings Have Enjoyed the Chase Here.

London.—Now that Robin Hood, prince of outlaws, has appeared again on the stage, it may be interesting to know what his former haunt, Sherwood forest, is like today. When he was alive the forests of North Yorkshire were one immense woodland, but even in its present shrunken size Sherwood is said by a correspondent of the Bellman to be unequalled in all Europe.

From the days of the Normans to the time of the Stuarts, some six centuries, the kings of England were often in Sherwood forest enjoying the pleasures of the chase. Here and there were royal hunting boxes, of which little now remains save more or less legendary stories. But there are still in existence many remnants of the religious houses which in their day were both numerous and important.

The district known as The Dukerie, is perhaps the finest portion of the existing forest. Its title is due to the fact that within its borders were the homes of the dukes of Portland, Newcastle, Norfolk, Kingston and Leeds. There is no duke of Kingston today, and the dukes of Norfolk and of Leeds have parted with their properties. But Earl Mansfield, a representative of the Kingston family, worthily maintains at Thoresby the best traditions of his race. As Welbeck Abbey the duke of Portland resides, and the duke of Newcastle's principal seat is the home of his father's at Clumber.

Sherwood is of such antiquity that no record or history makes any mention of its beginning. There is scarcely a doubt that it was part of the aboriginal forest land with which at one time England was almost covered. Now all that remains of the beautiful woodland is comprised in the portions of Birkland and Bilgham.

It is feared, though, the forest's rapid deterioration may be predicted, for railways are to be run through and coal pits are being opened in the near neighborhood and no great time will likely elapse before the forest in all its beauty will be a thing of the past.

One of the most venerable of the ancient manarchia is the Queen, or Major, oak. At first glance it may be slightly disappointing, for the mass of foliage almost obscures the wonderful trunk, but a nearer approach will fill you with surprise and delight. It has a girth of 20 feet at a height of five feet, while the spread of its branches is nearly 200 feet. The hollow trunk is most remarkable. It has been recorded that seven people have breakfasted within its space and that sixteen people have been squeezed into the hole. The marks of tempests and lightning are visible upon its time-worn trunk.

Birklands owes its name to its birches, but it has oaks also and is a region of grace and beauty. Old and mighty trees are scattered about, some of them worn down to the very ultimatum of ruin, standing huge masses of blackness. A long and very beautiful drive leads to the famous old oak known as the Shambles, or Robin Hood's ladder. It is said that the prince of outlaws used to hang his venison on its branches and perhaps he did. Years ago the tree was set on fire, but though its trunk is charred and hollow, it still stands and flourishes.

TWO BOYS WHIRL ON SHAFT

Yell Till Machinery Stops, and Then Escape With Severe Injuries.

York, Pa.—Caught by a belt in the Koechenour flour mill at Mt. Wolf, Gilbert Beattie and George Knudsen, boys of the neighborhood, were badly injured and only escaped death through the prompt action of the miller in shutting down the machinery.

Both boys were whirling upon the shaft when their cries attracted attention. The Beattie boy had one arm almost torn from its socket, and his companion was severely bruised.

BOSTON WARS ON MOSQUITO

Breeding Marshes to Be Drained With Aid of Suburban Cities to Exterminate Pests.

Boston.—Half a dozen cities in suburban Boston have joined with Boston in a fight against the mosquito. The marshes north of Boston are believed to be largely responsible for the millions of the insects which annually invade the city, and in an effort to get rid of them a contractor is to drain the marshes and exterminate the mosquitoes.

The cities of Medford, Malden, Revere, Chelsea, and Somerville have operations being carried on in other municipalities.

Human Chain Rescues Man.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—One of the most daring rescues in the history of Niagara falls was made by Aran Kevorkian, an Armenian. Wading out waist-deep into the rapids a short distance above the cataract, he pulled to shore with a pike pole the unconscious form of Henry J. Smith of Buffalo.

Kevorkian was assisted by David Gordon and Park Constable Thomas Harrington, who formed a human chain, anchoring the Armenian to the shore and enabling him to resist the current, which was unusually strong owing to the high water.

Near Death in Odd Mishap.

Middletown, N. Y.—Jumping from a box car with a large iron pinch bar in his hand Charles E. Horton, Jr., was struck by an Erie east-bound train here in such a manner as to cause the bar to fly around and hit him in the back of the head.

Horton was whirled over and over but he soon sprang to his feet, and although suffering from a wound in the back of his head is not seriously injured.

5,000 Eggs Daily From Farm.

Petaluma, Ore.—Bowman Blanchard, one of the most extensive poultry raisers in the Two Rock valley, made a record shipment of eggs recently. He has more than ten thousand hens on his ranch and gathers more than five thousand eggs daily.

RISES GHOSTLIKE IN COURT

Very Much Alive, First Husband Appears in Annulment Suit at Paterson, N. J.

Paterson, N. J.—For ten years looked upon as dead, Ralph Mowerson of Syracuse, N. Y., walked into Vice-Chancellor Stevenson's court and established that he was alive. The suit of John G. Schwartz, secretary and treasurer of the Schwartz Building company, against his wife Hannah for annulment of their marriage was under consideration. Mrs. Schwartz was testifying when Peter J. McGlinis, counsel for Schwartz, ordered Mowerson to stand up.

"Do you know that man?" the woman was asked. Only a moment before she declared she learned her first husband had died somewhere in the west. Mrs. Schwartz gasped and almost whispered: "Yes, I know that man, he is my husband." She was then excused.

Mowerson testified that he married Hannah E. Grant May 8, 1896, at Tallman, N. Y. Ten years ago he deserted his wife, he admitted, and went to Phillipsburg, Mont. He denied that he had ever caused to be written letters to his wife declaring his death. Mrs. Schwartz testified that she had received a letter from his sister in Idaho telling of his death.

No Spectacle Army Aviators.

Washington.—Army officers who wear eyeglasses for any purpose other than reading will be barred from the aeronautical division of the signal corps in the future. The report that a French aviator killed recently probably lost his life as a result of a blinding coat of frost on his glasses has caused the rule against spectacle flyers in the United States army to be made ironclad.

Was Engaged to 17 Girls.

Berne, Switzerland.—Leave it to the plumber for nerve. Albert Stierli, a Swiss leak-fixer, has been sentenced to a year in jail for becoming engaged to 17 girls.

Even a fool, when he holds his peace, is counted wise.—Bible.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Chinese Wife "Alla Samee 'Melican"

kee de-good time. Woman no stilly home, she say.

And there you have it—the suffragette invasion of Chinatown.

NEW YORK.—Quon Shee Fee, fair as the golden lily of the Hoang Ho, dainty as the purple plum that ripens under tea house eaves at Canton, has skipped from her golden nest at 9 Pell street, and there remains to mourn her Lou Fee, her lord, Mouchcock, her white poodle, and Tee-lee, the yellow canary by the window.

Quon Shee Fee flew into a rage the other night, hurled her husband's supper out of the window, beat her husband's cousin, Lou Pon, over the head with a heavy fan, and then went out into the dark of Pell street to lose herself from the sight of her outraged lord and master. All Chinatown hummed for days with the scandal.

"She make-ee de-suffragette business alla-time," was the way Lou Pon, the abused cousin, explained the flight of Quon Shee Fee.

"Alla-time she mak-ee lead-um 'bout de-suffragette. Alla-time tink-um 'bout foot woman like business. Woman alla-samee husband, she say. Woman got fo' have good time like husband—got fo' stay out night—got fo' ma-

kee de-good time. Woman no stilly home, she say.

And there you have it—the suffragette invasion of Chinatown.

Lou Pon, who is more prosperous than the average of his fellows through the profitable tea business that he conducts at 9 Pell street, began to hear faint rumblings of trouble the other morning, so he told Lieutenant Burke of the Elizabeth street station. He had been out playing dominoes the night before and had not come home until after midnight.

There had been a fine row; this much Lou Pon admitted. His spouse had declared flatly that if he was going to stay out all hours of the night playing dominoes or fan-tan with the other Four Brothers boys, he need not expect to find a wife waiting for him at home.

But Lou Pon, who is high in the councils of the Four Brothers, the implacable enemies of the On Leong Tong, told his wife very properly—by Chinese standards, at least—to keep her mouth shut. He would stay out as late as he pleased. So yesterday when dinner time, at 7 o'clock, the lord of this suffragette spitfire was not at home to partake of his evening shark's fin.

But Cousin Lou Pon was and he got what was designed for the husband.

Get More Milk by Serenading Cows

SPOKANE.—Practical dairymen and veterinarians and animal psychologists in the Spokane district and throughout eastern Washington are agreed that the theory advanced by Josiah Grant of Wisconsin to increase the milk supply by the introduction of dreamy waltz music in the cow stables is reasonably logical and worthy of serious consideration.

That idea is not to be treated lightly.

Ident of the Spokane district, who is confident the theory is correct, saying: "Music affects and soothes every animal or human being. Loud music would cause an animal to be nervous, while soft music, which would soothe the nerves of the cow, would naturally increase the milk production."

Dr. Otto Ming of the veterinary staff of the State of Washington college, who conducted experiments along similar lines while preparing a work on animal psychology, said the man who ridiculed the Grant idea is merely betraying his ignorance.

Dr. Walter R. also a member of the staff, recalled an experiment where a dog secretes more saliva while eating as music is being played, and indorses the plan.

"I am inclined to think there may be more than a grain of truth in the reasoning, but I would not want Sousa with his brass band to amuse my cows. I believe violin music would get better results. In other words, I would prefer Kubelik to Sousa to entertain our cows at milking time."

Jelly Juggler Puts Coppers to Rout

Mall were the besiegers of "Jelly Fort."

CLEVELAND, O.—The "Battle of Fort Jelly" just now is the talk of the North side.

With officers in front of him, officers behind him, and officers circling all around him, Frank Klingang, whose home is thought to be at 165 Grant street, hurled jars of jelly and other canned condiments at his assailants the other day. The latter were trying to capture his fort, which consisted of the cellar of the residence of Mrs. Henry W. Oliver, at 345 Ridge avenue.

Sergeant of Police James Rea and Wagonmen James Sherry and Philip

Klingang entered the cellar through a window which he smashed with a brick. Before entering he relieved himself of all his garments. Neighbors telephoned the police. In a few minutes the battle was on. First one policeman and then another, in their advance on the besieged, felt missiles whiz past their heads and smash with a juicy crash against the wall. Try as they might, they could not reach the jelly javelin thrower.

After an inglorious retreat and a palaver as to the best means of obtaining the surrender of the fort they returned to the attack, only to be met with a different defense. Klingang had discarded his jelly jars and assumed a mallet. This he swung about his head. When his attention was attracted by revolver shots the three officers pounced upon him.

Lambs Are Slaughtered as Sacrifice

TOLEDO, O.—When a number of East side residents saw several men and women gathered about some bleating lambs they held before them, they thought little of it. But when they suddenly saw one of the men insert a knife in the neck of a lamb they were amazed. They crowded closer and saw these same men hold the dying lamb while men and women stood about reverently, muttering sounds taken to be prayers.

All this appeared strange to those who watched, and one of them, who was angered at the slaughter of the lambs on the open lot in the residential district, called the police.

When the motor cops arrived they found the watchers of the lambs surrounded by many other residents of the East side. The man who slaughtered the first lamb cut the throat of another. The live lambs stood near by.

The police learned that the lambs were being slaughtered by a number of Bulgarians, members of the Greek Catholic church, who had begun the observance of the feast of spring. The proper observance of this custom, it was learned, was for the sacrifice of four lambs annually. After the lambs were killed the carcasses were piled upon a fire and roasted, the meat of which was devoured by members of the church as fulfilling their part of the sacrifice.

After the slaughter of the second lamb the remaining two were taken to a vacant house near by, where they met the fate of the others. These also were roasted upon the fire in the vacant lot.

THURSDAY, JULY 4th, 1912.

John M. Slaton and Joe Hill Hall are going along conducting their campaign on the lines heretofore followed. No matter who else runs neither is likely to change his plans.

The present legislature seems to be a real working body. In previous years it has been customary for the body to adjourn on Fridays until Mondays following during the early parts of each session. However, the present one worked last Saturday. Even the senate insisted on remaining here and not taking the usual week-end recess.

A poll of the legislature taken since the beginning of the present session shows it to be about five to one for Slaton as against the field, as it is now it may be. As the body is made up overwhelmingly of men who supported Senator Smith, and as Slaton always voted for Governor Brown, this condition is taken as a good indication that Slaton has a strangle-hold on the governorship. Less than a half a dozen of the state senate, over which Mr. Slaton is presiding, will oppose him regardless who comes out.

Bill Miner, the noted train robber and outlaw, escaped from the Georgia penitentiary at Milledgeville State Farm with two other prisoners. W. J. Widencamp, serving a life sentence and W. M. Wiggins a year for carrying a pistol. They sawed their way to liberty. Miner was double-shackled to his iron cot and to a post on the second floor. He sawed the shackles from his legs, and then with a bed slat, prized the iron bars from a window. He let himself to the ground by a rope made of bed clothing. There were two guards on duty at the time of the escape. Some one must have slept on his job.

The early-and-late mail service between here and Murphy, was begun last Monday morning, and certainly is an appreciated addition to the former service. We now have six mails a day coming in to our town, and the same number departing—two from Murphy, one from Blairsville, one from Hiawassee, and one from each end of the rural route. This gives us a service almost as good as the railroad towns have. We owe our thanks to congressman Tom Bell for his influence in helping us get the new service.

Editor Young Harris News:

I have just returned from a trip to Washington, D. C., and I want to state to the citizens of the 9th congressional district through your paper, that I was most delightfully surprised with the work of Hon. Thos. M. Bell.

I did not have to remain in the city long, or make many inquiries to learn that he is one of the busiest and most respected member of congress. He does not make as loud or long speeches as some, but when it comes diplomacy and chicanery, he has them beat to a frazzle. As a result of his promptness, untiring zeal, and affability, he has placed himself high in the estimation of his fellow members. "As the many honorable positions he holds will indicate." He certainly has a strong hold on the House, and can get almost anything he wishes. Therefore, there is no district more ably, or conscientiously represented than ours. What surprised me most was how he has accomplished so much in so short a time, for there are others there who have been in congress the greater part of their lives who cannot command anything like the respect our member has. It seems to me that under existing circumstances the wisest thing we could do, is keep him where he is. I am sure we have the right man in the right place, who is striving with all his might to take care of us. The longer we keep him there the more he can accomplish for his people. We will never have a member more zealous, punctual and determined that our interests are not imposed upon.

It would take a new member several terms to represent us as well as he ever did. I thought before I voted congress that Bell rather played around the edges and did not take an active part. But I want to say that I found him in the thickest of the fight the busiest, and one of the most determined member present. I certainly think it would be one of the unwise things to change him. A new member has to be there more than one year before he is recognized and the issues to be met at this time are so vitally important that we have need to continue Bell. He is so well known and respected, no one could better serve us at this time. The North realizes the importance of continuing a good man in office, and that is the main reason she has such advantage of the South in representatives. We should continue Bell in congress, not only for the reason he is best qualified to take care of us, but his work is invaluable to the future of democracy. I did not let him know I visited Washington, neither does he yet know it. So I had the opportunity of judging his every day work better. I can say to all citizens living in this district that they should be proud of their representative and forget it if they ever thought him incompetent. If congress was composed of such men as he entirely, the common people would have a glorious government. I do not know if Hon. T. M. Bell will be a candidate for re-election or not, but I do know that the people of the 9th need him and his influence more now than at any other time, and I sincerely hope that when each citizen casts his vote next election that he will not forget Bell.

Truly,
J. W. Crawford, M. D.

THE BUSINESS VALUE OF COURTESY.

If there is one trait, more than another, that indicates the true gentleman, it is courtesy. And it is doubtful if there is another quality that contributes more to success, either socially or commercially, than this much neglected moral grace of manner. We use the term moral advisedly, because true courtesy can only spring from a moral personality. Its exponent must possess a broad, generous nature, must practice the Golden Rule, must have an ever-present consciousness of what is due from him to all with whom he is brought in contact, regardless of their true position in the social business scale. In fact, true inbred courtesy is the hall-mark of a gentleman.

STICKTOITIVENESS.

Blessed be the man who sticks to his work, for he shall rejoice in its accomplishment.

Blessed is the man who hangs on to his job, for the end thereof is full knowledge of the way the work must be done.

Bless edis the man who puts his whole heart into his task, for at the end of the day his work will sing to him.

Blessed is the man who is not afraid of dirt, grime and labor stain, for when his work is done, clean will be the money in his pay envelope.

Blessed is the man who maketh the work at his hand a stepping stone to better things, for under the stimulation of work well done will come energy to rise to the higher place.

Blessed is the man who, through patience and industry, comes to the end of his day, for his sleep shall be sweet and his dreams divine.

The quitter is not so!

A great event took place in the nation's capitol on June 8, when a most elaborate monument to Christopher Columbus was unveiled to his memory as the Discoverer of America. The event was participated in by 50,000 Knights of Columbus, President Taft and his cabinet, together with congress and the senate and all judicial branches of the government, also many cardinals, bishops and other high dignitaries of the Catholic faith. June 8 was a great day in Washington, D. C.
